

I am very concerned about the possibility of the Sinclair Broadcasting Group forcing all of their affiliate stations to show "Wounded Honor", an extended political advertisement that is poorly concealed as a documentary.

I would be similarly concerned if a media megapoly chose Michael Moore's movie, Fahrenheit 9/11. While I personally chose to see this movie - my mind was made up before I saw it, and seeing it did not affect that. However, if the film was shown to millions of undecided voters - I would be concerned because of its impressionable content.

If Sinclair is allowed to do this, then one has to really wonder about the effectiveness of the FEC - a monetary value should be determined and associated with the broadcast, and count as a contribution to the relevant political party.

Please do not allow this action to go ahead as planned - I believe it will have a wild and negative impact on an already extremely delicate and sensitive electoral process.
